

ABOUT THIS DOCUMENT

The material presented in this document is the result of approximately thirty years of genealogical research (accomplished from time to time) by L. Martin Flanagan and Jay A. Flanagan.¹

The purpose of publishing this document is to add to, and correct several apparent errors, in other published accounts relative to this line of the FLANAGAN FAMILY, including the account published in:

THE FLANAGAN FAMILY OF PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA

Compiled by: Elizabeth (Betsy) Ross in July 1989

Published by: Flag Publications
Greenville, North Carolina

Some of the foregoing document by Elizabeth (Betsy) Ross is incorporated or duplicated, herein and thankful credit is due to Ms. Ross.

Credit is also rightfully given to:

THOMAS PHILLIPS OF PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA AND AFFILIATED FAMILIES

By: G. Howard Phillips, Ph.D.
Anundsen Publishing Company
Decorah, Iowa 1992

Copies of the foregoing publications can be found at the Greenville Public Library, Greenville, North Carolina and North Carolina State Library.

Credit is also given to the following:

THE DAVENPORTS AND THE FLANAGANS A Social History of Greenville and Pitt County, North Carolina

By: John Davenport Neville
The Pactolus Press
Pactolus, North Carolina 1992

CHRONICLES OF PITT COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA Pitt County Historical Society, Inc., Greenville, North Carolina 1982

¹ Jay Arch Flanagan and L. Martin Flanagan share a common great grandfather, Archibald H. Flanagan. Our fathers were double first cousins, being first cousins on their father's side of the family and their mother's side of the family (Smith). We have never decided exactly what degree cousins we are, but we do know that we are good friends. Jay was born in Pitt County, North Carolina, but now lives in Greenville, South Carolina.